

Privacy Policy.

Your confidentiality is important to us. Our service's policy is to respect your confidentiality in respect of any information that we may receive from you on our service and on other sites that we own and manage.

We will ask you for personal information only when we need it to provide you with our services. We collect information lawfully and honestly, keeping you fully informed and with your consent. We will also inform you why such information is collected and how we will use it.

We keep the collected information only for the period that is necessary to provide you with the requested service. The data that we keep shall be protected by commercially feasible means to prevent its loss and theft, unauthorized access, disclosure, copying use or tamper.

We do not make such information public or disclose it to third parties except when required by law.

Our service may reference third party sites that are not controlled by us. Please keep in mind that we do not control the content and policies of these sites and cannot assume any responsibility for their respective confidentiality policies.

You can always refuse our request to provide personal information, but keep in mind that in this case we will not be able to render you some of our services.

We will need information regarding your bank and other confidential information to make payments to you. You have sole responsibility for validity of such information for our payment processing.

Your continued use of our services shall constitute acceptance of our practices regarding confidential and personal information. If you have any questions regarding the way we process user data and personal information, do not hesitate to contact us.

This policy is valid as of 07.09.2021.